WINE MENU

Champagne, that bubbly beverage that pops its cork for celebrations, is named after the region in northeast France where it is produced. The name “Champagne” is protected, and only sparkling wine produced in the Champagne region can be called Champagne. The same goes for the process that assures those trademark bubbles: It is called the méthode champenoise and only Champagne-makers in Champagne can claim its use.

Champagne, though not quite as we know it today, first arrived in England with the exiled Norman, Chevalier de Saint-Évremond, in 1670 and rapidly assumed prime position as Charles II’s favourite libation.

Shortly after, in 1674, the invention of lead glass by George Ravenscroft changed the art of glassmaking forever. Ravenscroft’s discovery was only made possible by the higher temperatures maintained over longer periods achieved by coal – (as opposed to wood-) fired ovens. It would, of course, have important ramifications.

Our wine list has been carefully chosen with the help of our highly experienced supplier who personally source a boutique wine selection from small, independent wineries across the globe. Wines to enjoy as you relax on the sun terrace and watch the world go by, a glass of ‘fizz’ while you make your menu choices, your favourite wine to accompany your meal.
